Department of Sociology

WHY CHOOSE SOCIOLOGY?

The Sociology Master's program offers a rigorous course of instruction that will prepare you to investigate and understand the complexities of contemporary societies. The curriculum includes courses in classical and contemporary sociological theory, practical training in quantitative and qualitative research methods, and cultivation of your critical thinking and writing skills.

The program has been carefully designed to offer you a rich and complete sociological education, while simultaneously offering flexibility and opportunities for you to follow your personal interests.

KEY TOPICS

You will discover great diversity in the topics taught by the department faculty, including demography, religion, science and technology, education and health, social exclusion, urban studies, gender studies, environmental studies, stratification, ethnic minorities, migration, popular culture, the study of post-socialist societies, the problems of democratic transitions, and the analysis of other contemporary social issues within European and global contexts.

HIGHLIGHTS

In addition to the program's core courses, you are free to create a course of independent study in cooperation with a teacher, and to use a semester for study at universities throughout Europe as an exchange student.

CAREER PROSPECTS

A diploma in Sociology prepares you for advanced graduate study, or for a professional career in fields ranging from state administration, marketing, and business to education, journalism, and the non-governmental sector.
